“An immersive experience in comfortable surroundings. With some opportunities to network and an abundance of positivity to motivate during the conference, and beyond!”

PREVIOUS ATTENDEE

Despite thousands of published articles on FASD, limited research focuses specifically on adolescents and adults with FASD. As individuals diagnosed with FASD age, the “need to know” across a broad spectrum of areas continues to be critically important for identifying clinically relevant research questions and directions that will impact their day-to-day function and health outcomes.

Building on the work of eight previous conferences*, we aim to examine relevant global research, programs, and policies. What can we learn from practice-based evidence? What does existing or emerging research tell us? Are the results transferable from country to country and/or from laboratory and clinical studies to real life? Are there clinical implications of results from any of these areas of which we should be aware? What are the changes in our thinking, practice, and directions that will be required to improve outcomes? What are the implications for the future?

We hope you can join us at this interactive conference and be at the forefront of addressing these relevant global issues.

*This conference, previously held in Vancouver and hosted by University of British Columbia’s Interprofessional Continuing Education, has been moved to Seattle, the birthplace of the FASD diagnosis in North America. FASD United has taken on the task of putting on this unique global FASD conference in consultation with the International Adult Leadership Collaborative (ALC) of FASD Changemakers, a group of talented and dedicated individuals with FASD who are leaders in the community.

This multidisciplinary conference will be of interest to the audiences listed below, as well as anyone working towards an advanced understanding in the field of FASD.

TESTIMONIALS

POLICY MAKER

“ I loved hearing first-hand from individuals with FASD or their parents, mothers, grandmothers who were living with the real challenges of FASD.

PAST ATTENDEE

RESEARCHER

“ I enjoyed hearing about emerging research, how far some countries still need to go regarding the diagnosis of FASD, and the joint team work between those with and without an FASD diagnosis. Highlights include what needs to change regarding prevention messages, and stigma.

PAST ATTENDEE

SOCIAL WORKER

“ I really loved the format of the pre-conference workshop again this year. I enjoyed the balance of engaging presentations and small group discussions that challenged my assumptions and beliefs. The workshop was extremely well run and managed. Having a designated table facilitator was also helpful. I find it most helpful when tables have adversity of participants (vs. people from same organization sitting together).
